PROPERTY OWNERS TO SEEK CONSULTANT FOR ROAD

Monterey County Planning Commission last Tuesday granted the 90-day continuance sought by Carmel Valley's two property owners associations for the plan-lines on Carmel Valley Rd. Representing the CVPOA and the M-CVPOA, John Sigourney and Ariel Lane expressed themselves as well-satisfied with the county's "cooperative attitude."

County Road Commissioner Bruce McClain stressed that each additional delay means additional difficulties in planning the road, might even necessitate a new set of aerial photographs, and works a hardship on people now seeking to build homes. He reminded property owners that the county proposed the plan-lines a year ago, and has been granting continuances on a decision ever since.

In opposition to the representatives of the two property owners associations, Beverly Stover presented a petition against a long-discarded plan originally suggested (never seriously proposed) by Road Commissioner Bruce McClain.

Sigourney and Lane said they felt that the latest continuance would provide sufficient time for residents to come to final decisions regarding the details of the road now desired.

They wished to make the following points:

1. This must be a cooperative venture between the people in the Valley and the county.

2. The POA's will now seek a professional planner as a disinterested third party to serve as consultant. Both Lane and Sigourney will be happy to receive suggestions from all property owners regarding choice of a consultant firm.

3. Every property owner affected will be contacted individually before any decision is made regarding the route of the road in relation to his property. "Nobody is going to be left out, and nothing is going to be done under the table," said Sigourney. Both Lane and Sigourney have already received calls from worried property owners in this regard.

"Some people naturally are concerned that the road will run too close to their houses or right through them," said Sigourney. "Nobody wants such a thing. A lot of effort has already been expended by the Road Committee, but a lot more time is going to be spent consulting carefully with every affected property owner. Whenever possible, we will bring the planner to the site of the property currently under discussion."

4. Some funds for the consultant must be put forth by the residents. "Mr. Tom Hudson has already offered his support, and will continue to work until the amount to be furnished by the county is determined," Sigourney stated. "Then we will need a fund drive of our own. I do not think it unrealistic to expect $5 from each property owner; of course we will be glad to have more in some cases. If we are to participate in a project far beyond what the county can usually offer, we should be glad to do our share," he concluded.

Allen Jenkins Seeks Theatre Site in CV

That Allen Jenkins of Hollywood fame has been seeking a site for a legitimate theatre on the Monterey Peninsula for some time is no secret. That he was looking in Carmel Valley last week may come as more of a surprise.

"I don't think there's any doubt about this Valley," said he. "It's one of the showplaces of the world. If the residents can just hang onto their plans for it--and not be swayed by any hotshot promoters..."

Jenkins was shown the few places in the Valley where commercial development is a part of the Master Plan, where a theatre would be an "appropriate use."

Accompanying him in his search were longtime friends Ralph Geddis and Francois Martin of CV's Tantamount Theatre, as well as writer Victor Rosen of Monterey, who has known the actor for some 15 years.

"Wherever we decide to locate on the Monterey Peninsula, Geddis and Martin will play a part in our plans," said Jenkins. Jenkins said he envisions a

EDITORIAL: WHAT IS "INCENTIVE ZONING" ???

The idea has been advanced that our scenic Valley should have a scenic highway rather than an ordinary 4-lanes, such as one might expect of an ordinary vale.

With the idea arises a serious question: Who is going to pay for all this?

What makes a highway scenic is what you see from it. California is full of scenery which goes unseen because motorists drive for miles without viewing anything but the houses which line the road and the TV antennae and power poles which protrude upward in such populated areas. Drive a block or two off many California highways and you're in open country. But you can't see it from the road.

How are scenic areas to be preserved alongside our road rather than unseen (and often unused) behind the homes of the many who populate its length?

FROM AREA PLAN

The following is condensed and adapted from the section on Incentive Zoning in "The Peninsula Tomorrow," a booklet recently released by the Monterey Peninsula Area Planning Commission, (Keith Evans, Chairman):

Residential development creates the greatest demand for land. This demand raises the cost of land so that public acquisition in the amounts needed becomes impossible.

Can the beauty of the Peninsula be preserved by some method based upon this very development which might otherwise destroy it?

Basic densities of population must be established in advance --including the greenbelts. When a subdivision is proposed, areas designated as greenbelts can be calculated at two times the basic density if scenic easements or similar protection is guaranteed.

For example, take a 100-acre subdivision proposed for an area with a basic density of one dwelling unit per acre, where twenty acres are designated as greenbelt. For the 20-acre easement, the developer would be given a credit of 40 residential units to be used on the remaining 80 acres together with his normal 80 units there.

In this subdivision, houses will then be set back from the road so that scenery remains intact (a) for all motorists, including the homeowners affected and (b) for homes to look upon, as well. How many picture windows nowadays--even in Carmel Valley--look straight at a road full of cars?

The developer will have the "incentive" to plan in this fashion because he will be allowed 120 units instead of the usual 100.

Scenic easements along the road could be used as today--for grazing horses, orchards, pumpkin fields. In some cases the easement could allow a landscaped "prestige" front yard for a residential area where the houses in some cases, were set well back from the road. As in the new CV Golf & Country Club, the scenic easements could consist of golf course; in some (as in the just-begun Hidden Valley), bridge trails could be included in the dedicated land. But it could not be built upon...

The article concludes, "We cannot afford to drift; we cannot afford to take no action."

CRITICISM

Ed. Note: We have heard incentive zoning referred to as "just another way of breaking down the 1-acre minimum." We can only say that the 1-acre minimum was the greatest gift that the Carmel Valleyites of a decade ago could possibly have given to us, the present residents. But like all foresighted people, our predecessors could not foresee all eventualities. Concepts of community planning have in this decade progressed past the point of limitation merely in terms of numbers. How many people is not the only important question. How to arrange them for maximum privacy for all and maximum preservation of beauty is equally as important. We cannot expect private developers to set aside scenic easements for us unless they are given some incentive. It may be necessary to allow a few more people in Carmel Valley in order to persuade developers to set aside open space which will be a permanent pleasure to all of us. With the one-acre minimum as our only planning tool, we cannot preserve the Valley's beauty. A careful inspection of some of the development on the Valley floor today should help make this clear. Next week (or as soon as we have room!) we'll present diagrams of existing subdivisions which will illustrate these points. --B. B.

BLOOD BANK RESULTS

Sixty-nine residents appeared at the bloodmobile last week and offered to give blood; 61 were found able to do so.

Mrs. Thomas B. McKiernon, chairman of the drive in Carmel Valley, would like to thank the 26 volunteers who telephoned 625 people in an effort to reach the goal of 100. Of the willing donors who came to the bloodmobile, 36 had given formerly and 31 were attempting to give for the first time.

Kiwanis Hears About Modern Math

BY BOB STUART

Kiwanis Club members went back to school Tuesday. Mrs. Willie Belle Mason, math teacher at Carmel Jr. High, presented a short program on modern math at the weekly meeting at Los Laureles Lodge.

Assisted by one of her students, Valleyite Steve Antoncich, Mrs. Mason convincingly and wittily explained the reasons for the "new" math--not "new" at all, just a better way of teaching.

"Math is the thinker's tool," she said. Even the most magnificent computer is useless without the thinking human being to feed it data, and tell it what to do. And the thinking technician is just as necessary as the scientist when it comes to making our space program equipment work. Since both the technician and the scientist are needed, the parent should encourage the child to follow his natural bent, to make use of his facilities, and to advance to his greatest capacity--in whatever field he chooses, said Mrs. Mason.

Mathematics, by teaching logical thinking processes, is one road to this goal of advancing and adding to the human world, she explained.

Accompanying Mrs. Mason and Steve, was pretty Susan York, also a math teacher at Carmel Jr. High.

DESPITE BITES, SCOUT WILDLIFE EXHIBIT WAS GREAT

The wildlife exhibit prepared by Carmel Valley Boy Scout Troop 140 was one of the most popular at last weekend's Scout Fair, Frank Preve, troop scoutmaster reports.

The 16 boys in the troop made traps and captured a raccoon, fox, wood rat, king snake and Western racer in Carmel Valley on Saddle Mountain Ranch --also a possum which escaped-- and borrowed a wild boar from Stuyvesant Fish to complete their exhibit. They sold their quota of tickets, too.

The boys constructed the traps so that none of the wildlife would be hurt and all will be loosed again in the Valley. Because the rat and the fox each bit a boy, these two animals are still in captivity pending results of rabies tests.

BATTISTA ODELLO

Battista Odello, aged 77, died of a heart attack last Saturday at his ranch at the Carmel River mouth. Born in Micetto, Italy, near Turin, he came to the U.S. in 1909 to work in the mines near Redding. Four years later he returned to his native city to marry Josephine Carnazzone. A Golden Wedding anniversary would have been celebrated this August.

After more work at the Redding mines (where he became chief pump man) and five years at the steel works in South San Francisco, he brought his family to Carmel in 1924, leasing 300 acres of bottom land at the river mouth. Battista Odello cleared what was then swampland and on it developed the largest independent artichoke business in the world. In 1953 he saw a longtime dream come true: he became owner of the acres he had reclaimed and cultivated.

Two of his sons, Bruno and Emilio, took over the management of the Odello ranch in 1945, but his interest and participation in the project remained strong. On graduation from California Polytechnic, his grandson John, the eldest son of Bruno, plans to join the family venture.

Contributions in his memory may be made in the form of spiritual bouquets or as donations to such charities as his friends wish to choose.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL ANNOUNCED

ON PESTICIDE PROBLEM

Having just read the "Silent Spring" by Rachel Carson, I couldn't help but watch our lovely Carmel River and wonder how many parts per million of its contents were made up of organic phosphates and other synthetic chemical residuals. Many people have asked me my frank opinion about the wisdom of using many of these new sprays and weed killers that might be harmful to animal life (which includes us.)

This is a subject that calls for much more investigation and study. I personally feel that we regard most of these chemicals much too lightly. We seem so intent on finding the most deadly killer that we overlook the harmful side effects we may be creating.

To me the most meaningful thoughts from this book, aside from its actual data regarding the use and misuse of these chemicals, was Dr. Carson's regard for the biological entity of this world. As humans, who tend to self-evaluate ourselves as the most important living factor on this earth, we think in terms of overcoming our "enemies" with little regard for the consequences of other forms of life around us (and our own lives!) Thoughtful people know that plant, insect, and animal life are all intricately woven into one divine pattern. However, in our zeal to "make our life easier" or at times perhaps through commercialization, we seek ends which seemingly will destroy our enemies without taking into account that our enemies may be part of this complex biological circle upon which our existence depends--as much as they may depend (and prey) on us at times!

THINK

To me much of the book was a call for us to start thinking in terms of controlling our predators with means more compatible with nature, rather than weapons that may destroy us along with our enemies. I felt she was saying that too much of our research is being channeled along the wrong lines. Too many decisions were being made by governmental and private parties regarding the selection and methods of using these highly poisonous materials without qualified personnel to conduct this work and with very little responsibility regarding the results of their decisions.

We still have--and sell--sprays that contain natural insecticides such as Pyrethrum and Rotenone, which are far less toxic to animals.

I have read arguments from large chemical firms and in some of the more popular magazines, that tend to play down Miss Carson's thesis that it is foolhardy to go overboard for these toxic materials. Many of their arguments have great merit, but I personally felt that Miss Carson's position was brought about through her love and respect for the natural forces with which we live, while most of the arguments in answer to her book were dominated by the type person who defines "maintenance of the human race" quite differently from the "dreamers" (as one article referred to Miss Carson) who love nature, streams, other animals, etc., and who think in broad terms about the inter-relatedness of different forms of life and over-all biological trends.

Still other arguments against "Silent Spring" made me feel that the people involved resented having the validity of their occupations and/or products questioned.

To me the details of this book are not the important message Miss Carson was trying to get across. I believe she was saying to those of us actively engaged in the development, use of, and sale of products for biological control to THINK, as the sign says, before it's too late!

The Book Review: SILENT SPRING BY RACHEL CARSON

Drawings by Lois and Louis Darling, Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston: 368 pages, $5.00
(Available at Thunderbird Shop)

REVIEWED BY SHIRLEY BASS

When she published The Sea Around Us biologist Rachel Carson established herself as a skillful writer.

With Silent Spring she has made her mark as a writer able to arouse passions. It is difficult to remain dispassionate as the author catalogues effects of the "alarming assault" upon our immediate environment by dangerous and even lethal pesticides.

Silent Spring is a controversial book. In writing of the pollution of nature which is "for the most part irrecoverable" and of the "irreversible chain of evil" which has been initiated during the past 25 years, Miss Carson challenges her readers to think about unpleasant things.

Her graceful imagery lingers in the mind's eye; her chilling case histories are impossible to ignore.

Just one sample: she pictures Clear Lake, California where in 1949 chemical warfare on gnats was declared. By 1954 the gnats had capitulated. So had the fish who had absorbed the poison from the water and the birds who had fed on the fish. In 1959 the California Department of Health required that the use of DDT in the Lake be stopped.

"But what," asks the author, "of the fisherman who had caught a string of fish from Clear Lake and taken them home to fry for supper?"

The book has not been ignored. Reviewers have lauded the documented research. Segments of public opinion have agreed with her plea for a thorough research program which will enable men to learn to use pesticides safely and effectively. Other segments, including undoubtedly

by Dorothy Reed

Carmel Valley may soon lose one of its active and community-minded families as a result of the presence in the air of residues from insecticide sprays, it was learned recently. Mrs. Eva Vanetti confirmed recently that her family home on Boronda Drive is for sale because she suffers such a severe allergy to insecticides that during the spraying season life becomes, in her words, "hardly worth it."

Mrs. Vanetti's symptoms began about nine years ago with persistent headache and soreness at the back of her neck and down the spinal column, augmented by pain in joints and muscles and a general condition of fatigue and weakness. Suspicious of a brain tumor, doctors hospitalized her for X-rays, which showed no tumor but did indicate pressure on the brain and other nerve centers, especially in the spine. Extensive tests by a local physician, later corroborated by a neurosurgeon, finally pointed to a sensitivity to the poisons commonly used in pest-killing sprays for gardens and trees.

Her illness, according to Mrs. Vanetti, has increased because of the gradual accumulation of these poisons in her body to the point where even a slight additional exposure causes swelling of mucous membranes and affects her vision and breathing. She carries an emergency supply of oxygen with her at all times. No drugs are available for antidotes; in fact, the use of many ordinary medicines seems to be contraindicated, appearing to aggravate her symptoms rather than relieve them.

The only interval in recent years when she has been really comfortable, she says, was last summer when she and her son John camped in their trailer high in the mountains away from all agricultural activity. Shortly after her return to the Valley last fall her headaches began again, which settled the family's determination to look for a high-altitude ranch to live on, as soon as their house is sold.

In the meantime the Vanettis, who have always been enthusiastic 4-H members, continue to garden on their own land, raising vegetables, flowers, and fruit trees, as well as healthy lambs, heifers, and chickens, all without the use of sprays.

Carson's "emotional outburst" may do more harm than good.

This "emotional outburst" is heartily recommended to the thoughtful Carmel Valley reader who would like to make up his own mind whether his voice needs to be heard in deciding what is being done to the air he breathes, the water he drinks, and the soil on which his life depends.

THE OPPOSITION

To present all sides of an issue has been the policy of the OUTLOOK--and that goes for bug spray, too. Next week we'll present selections from literature circulated by such sources as the J.J. Dill Company, purveyors of insecticides and equipment; Chemical Engineering News, etc. Also any irate letters subscribers (or advertisers) care to contribute.

the manufacturers of insecticides and herbicides, have disagreed with her stated aim of reducing the use of pesticides to a minimum by developing alternate means of keeping insects in check.

Last month's issue of Reader's Digest published a review condensed from Time with the editorial comment that "many scientists strongly disagree with the author." Terming the book "a real shocker" the December Digest quotes Time as saying that many scientists fear that Miss

Another Case : Authoress Linda Clark Afflicted, Also

Linda Clark, who recently began the "Stay Young Longer" radio series over KDON, represents a second medically authenticated case of a local person who suffered serious illness as a result of over-accumulation of insecticides. (She was living in another state at the time.) The Valley housewife has a master's degree in nutrition and is the author of the book with the same title as her radio series.

Linda wrote the following brief description of her difficulties for the OUTLOOK:

"Like any other housewife, when DDT and related pesticides first came on the market, I was delighted. We were living in the Southeast U.S. and plagued with insects inside and outside the house. So I seized upon the sprays with glee and sprayed and sprayed. At first nothing happened, but... one morning I woke up feeling a little dizzy, fuzzy-minded, breathless and weak. After numerous cups of coffee the symptoms seemed to wear off.

A few days later they returned worse than ever. I found it hard to concentrate, to get going in the morning without more and more coffee and I dragged through the day. Later I began to feel faint at times and then, more disconcertingly, my vision began to dim...

Doctors were as mystified as I. They found "nothing wrong" and looked at me... as if I might be suffering from an over-active imagination. But by good luck, I discovered a specialist in this field who did recognize the symptoms and who in time, bless his heart, turned the tide and helped me back to health... How this was accomplished is described in detail in the author's book.

After her recovery, Linda looked for and found many references to the problem in professional journals. Two of many examples: Dr. Malcolm Hargraves of Mayo Clinic warns that pesticides can cause serious blood disorders, many ultimately fatal. His patients often did not notice symptoms until regular spraying programs continued for some time. Dr. Morris Biskind described symptoms such as great fatigue, irritability, vague fear, and later, as accumulation developed--tremors, convulsions, even paralysis.

Trail & Saddle Club Gymkhana May 26

A 75¢ brunch is scheduled for 11:00 a.m. and the show starts at noon. It's the first annual Carmel Valley Trail & Saddle Club Gymkhana, to be held Sunday, May 26, with 16 events plus a Broom Polo game.

Admission is 25¢ for adults and 10¢ for those under 17.

Many of the events are new to the club, including an invention of program chairman Bill Sellers, the open-end barrel race. In this event the contestant rides to an open-end barrel lying on the ground, dismounts, crawls through the barrel (enough to spook the horses!), finds his mount and returns to the starting line. Some club members have already bet "a 3-wire bale of Barry Brothers' best" that this event will be the laugh producer of the season.

Broom Polo is a 4-man team event played with a volley ball and old brooms, otherwise polo.

Entries in the show close at midnight May 23 and should be mailed to show secretary Ruth Bishop, Box 385, Carmel Valley. Entries are available in Salinas from Garcia's Saddlery, in Carmel from John Scott's Silver and Leather Shop, in Monterey from Roberts Tire Co., and in CV from Bennett's CV Market, Porter Marquard, and Village Market.

Entries will be divided into 3 age groups: 12 and under, 13 to 17, and 18 and over. Trophies will be awarded to first place winners and ribbons given lavishly, up to fifth place.

To reach the Trail and Saddle Club grounds, drive toward the river from Carmel Valley Rd. at the corner of Boronda Rd.

NOTES FROM

Hacienda Carmel

BY MARJORIE WEBER

Among Hacienda residents are many whose interesting lives have included worldwide travel. On a number of occasions they have shared their experiences through arm-chair travel via color slides.

One couple, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Brown, have perhaps traveled as widely or more so than any others here. Altogether they have taken some 3000 color photographs enroute and Mrs. Brown has kept a series of diaries to record their adventures.

Mrs. Brown began her travels at an early age; her father was a Scotch sea captain. She was born in Australia and the family transferred with his headquarters to Hong Kong and later to San Francisco -- where she met Mr. Brown.

The Browns agree that their most exciting adventure occurred on the Main Fiji Island, Viti Levu, in 1954, when they were on their first trip to the South Pacific. The airport (they were flying this trip) was 65 miles across the mountainous island from the small settlement where they were staying in an attractive, well-equipped native hotel, which housed its guests in individual thatched bamboo huts along the beach.

A heavy all-night downpour ushered in their day of departure. Taxis scheduled to take plane passengers to the distant airport arrived early that morning because the drivers feared difficulties--a fear that was later more than justified.

And so the small caravan of taxis, loaded with plane passengers and all their luggage, started out bravely in the continuing rain at 10:00 a.m., only to be halted every few miles at low places in the road. By late afternoon (they had had no lunch) they were completely stopped by high water.

The driver of one car started out at 4:30 to walk to the nearest telephone, which was at a sugar refining plant. He returned in pitch dark and pouring rain 3 hours later to report that the plant manager had offered to send the sugar cane train to take them as far as it went--to the river. The train approached, halting as near as possible to the stranded group, but they had to walk in the dark, through deep mud and water with all their luggage, to board it.

The train had no roof and low sides, but at least the travelers once more moved toward their destination--that is, until the gasoline engine gave out. Fortunately it had almost reached the river, and was pushed the rest of the way by native manpower. The helpful plant manager had arranged for small boats to take the people to a point where they could be met by car, and had also arranged for taxis to meet them.

After a few more complications, none too serious, the weary, wet, very muddy and hungry travelers arrived at the airport only 12 hours after they started--and in time for the plane.

"It is reasonably safe to assume that future population growth will be concentrated on land of 0 to 30% grade, with the greatest percentage of expansion on 0 to 10% grade."

Jr. High Parents

STYMIED ON FOOTPATH PROBLEM

Lost in the woods, also stymied by a deep gully, the executive board of Carmel Junior High School Parents Club decided last week to abandon further exploration for a footpath on the east side of Highway One.

Instead, considering that "authorities" had placed the school in the country, the board felt that it was now up to the school district to continue spending almost $3,000 a year on bus transportation for the 100 students that live within walking distance of the campus.

Colonel Arthur Black, safety chairman for the parents' group, told the OUTLOOK he tried to walk along the proposed route of the footpath and after threading through trees came to the gully which is so deep that no adequate, safe walk is feasible at this point unless the gully were filled. "An engineering feat!" he maintains.

This path, Black also pointed out, would enable the 66 students in the Hatton Fields and South Carmel Hills areas to walk to school. The 44 students in Mission Fields who are now bussed to the junior high could walk to school if one crosswalk were provided, he said.

It is apparent, considering Black's statement, that if proper crosswalks at the Rio Road-Highway One intersection were installed for Mission Fields students, they would then be able to continue to the school on the existing footpath provided by the county along Carmel Valley Road past Carmel Rancho shopping center, after following the old Valley road turnoff which is closed to traffic, but still paved. In fact, a Mission Fields parent told the OUTLOOK that two of her children do walk this route to and from the school.

This leaves the school district spending $2,762 this year for necessary bus transportation for 66 students; or approximately $45 per student. However, Colonel Black had another suggestion. If a crossing, comparable to the installation on Highway One at the entrance to Carmel High School, were installed at the north end of South Carmel Hills Drive, students from the Hatton Fields and South Carmel Hills areas could then follow the drive and bypass the gully. . . . IF--an easement were purchased across one privately owned lot east of the gully.

Crossing Carmel Valley Road to the county footpath would be no great problem, he said, if more crosswalks were marked at the shopping center.

Black insisted, however, that no such route can be developed from the limited resources of the Parents Club.

OPEN HOUSE FOR SYMPHONY PLAYERS

Miss Mary Lindsay-Oliver was hostess at her Studio of The Arts in Carmel on May 5 at her third annual open house for members of The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra and friends. Over 80 persons were present. Assisting Miss Lindsay-Oliver were Judge and Mrs. Eugene Harrah, Mrs. John Erskine, Mrs. Agnes Trumbly, Mrs. Ora Fallis and Robert Wells. Among those at the party were Mayor Eben Whittlesey, and Mrs. Whittlesey; Symphony Conductor John Gosling, and Mrs. Gosling; Fletcher Dutton, president of the Symphony Association, and Mrs. Dutton; Mrs. Frank Ringland, president of the Symphony Guild; Professor and Mrs. Walter Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Laidlaw Williams, Canon and Mrs. Charles Dowdell, Rev. H. H. M. Nicholas, Col. and Mrs. C. H. Du Val, Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph Edelman, Mr. and Mrs. King Benton, Mrs. Nancy Bowman, Miss Liesel Wurzmann, Mr. and Mrs. George Podberesky, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Dunsford, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lee, Miss Charlotte Perry, Mrs. Hascal Stuart, Mrs. Marie Sale and Mrs. Marjorie Oren.

Personal or community funds, and interest, are therefore necessary before an attempt can be made to save the almost $3000 it costs to bus 100 students to the junior high.

Carmel relinquished its policies against sidewalks in the residence zone, also tree preservation, when it became necessary to provide safe footpaths to Carmel High and Sunset schools.

These footpaths have become community assets to old and young alike. So would any footpath to the junior high school.

Next week the OUTLOOK will explore this path further.

Summer Teen Club

A summer evening club for teen-agers is being formed at Saddle Mountain Ranch. Plans are for at least one supervised recreation night per week using all facilities of Saddle Mountain Ranch (dance pavilion, swimming pool, games, barbecue, snack bar, etc.)

Membership cards for the summer season are $5 but must be purchased on behalf of the teen-agers by parents, according to Mrs. Milton Frumkin. There will be an additional charge of 50¢ per evening.

100-acre Saddle Mountain Ranch is located 4 miles up Carmel Valley, off Schulte Rd. Mr. and Mrs. Frumkin can be contacted at MA 4-1617.

TANTAMOUNT NOTES

Do you want to escape? A place to dream? Try this.

Scene: Bottom of the Sea.

Enter: Fish, Crab, Octopus, followed by a Mermaid.

Where else but in the magical world of make-believe that is the puppet theatre? All part of the script for "THE MERMAID" opening the 1963 Tantamount season, May 24.

Based on the popular story by Hans Christian Andersen, it marks the return to the Tantamount stage of Geddis & Martin's justly famous and widely traveled company of acting puppets, now Valley property owners and residents.

Lucky there is no county ordinance restricting the number of puppets to the acre, because the Geddis-Martin repertory is large and calls for the talents of hundreds of puppets of all descriptions all waiting in crates for the cry of "curtain!"

Since these actors are carved of wood, perhaps the cry should be "timber!". However as wood carvings they have been exhibited in their own right as works of art in leading museums of both coasts.

Geddis & Martin call their puppets "acting puppets" to set them rightfully apart from the toy variety of the child's world. And for G & M this is not child's play. Seasoned professional actors both, their particular brand of puppets is for the adult audience; they hasten to add, "recommended for family entertainment, and young playgoers are welcome in the family group."

In addition to the "MERMAID" a number of comedy acts will be performed as encores after the coffee intermission. These Innovation this year: to round off the evening's entertainment the audience is invited on stage for a behind-the-scenes view. Program is scheduled for a limited run of 4 week-ends, Friday and Saturday nights. Two matinees: June 1 and 8.

OTHER TANTAMOUNT ACTIVITIES

Classes now forming to study arts and crafts of Theatre. G & M personally will give private and group instruction--for beginning and advanced--in voice development, diction, acting, staging for "live" theatre. Offered as well, will be a complete technical workshop course in puppetry. This includes the making of puppets, acting with them--all production details.

CARMEL VALLEY GEM AND MINERAL SOCIETY

BY GALE HOLLOWAY

Mr. John Beach, geologist, presented a talk and slides on the geology of the King City area of the Arroyo Seco last Friday night at our regular monthly meeting. Ed Vanetti presented a fine display and discussion of emeralds, birthstone of the month. Kit Parker showed an excellent movie on Southwestern Indians. This latter was especially informative for the younger set, but older members were overheard making appreciative remarks, also.

TWO FIELD TRIPS SCHEDULED FOR MAY

A two-day field trip has been arranged for May 18 and 19 to Lake County, for Lake County diamonds. These are really quartz crystals but facet beautifully. Correspondence has been going on for months between Dot Adam, field-trip chairman and Mr. Mahnke, of the Mahnke Ranch, to make this trip possible. Mr. Mahnke will guide the group to the collecting area. Be sure to get your name on the list if you care to make this trip. (Call Dot Adam, FR 2-5663, for any additional information.)

A second trip has been planned for May 26, to the Bud Howard Ranch at Arroyo Seco. This one-day trip to a prime fossil collecting area will include the entire club, i.e., both adults and Pebble Pups. Meet at 10 a.m. in front of Winkler's Lapidary with your lunch and plenty of drinking water. G&M Society markers will be put out on the Carmel Valley Road to help latecomers find their way to the Howard Ranch, which is a full hour's drive toward Greenfield from Carmel Valley Village. (If you need more information, call Ruth Getz, OL 9-2851.)

MEMBERSHIP

There are now 35 Pebble Pups. Those with birthdays in May each received a carnelian at the May meeting. They were: Samuel Bashline, Theresa Bashline, Jim Gunter, Mark Holloway, David Osgood, John Scheid, and Elizabeth Templeton. All Pebble Pups have received a small bottle of beautifully polished stones as a gift from Carol Bethards. Many thanks to her for this generous gesture.

The adult membership is now approaching 150. The board plans a surprise for the lucky person who becomes the 150th member. So, join now!

PERIPATETIC --that's the only word for it. CV's cartoonist claque gathered recently for a good-bye Klatsch at their unofficial morning headquarters at the Thunderbird. Jack Keith is shown examining a mess of fishing equipment which had just arrived by mail-order from the CV Postoffice, next door; he's now on an extended camping trip. Frank O'Neal has just returned from the National Cartoonists Convention in New York; Bob Barnes, and wife Ruth, are by now half-way 'round the world; Al Parker left yesterday for Monaco to cover sportscar races for SPORTS ILLUSTRATED magazine.

JOE BROADMAN PLUGS FOLK FESTIVAL

CV's Joe Broadman, art teacher at Carmel Junior High School and a great advocate of folk music generally (as well as a performer) wants students to know that they can go half-price to any of the matinees of the Monterey Folk Festival this weekend. On Sunday evening, for a mere $1! The same goes for servicemen in uniform, says Joe. He says his favorite performers of the many are The Weavers.

"They sing for grown-ups, the Faculty," says Joe. "Terrific emotional and educational approach; very well done." Broadman is a member of the board of directors of the Folk Festival.

Trout Planting

The California Department of Fish and Game announced that Lower Arroyo Seco Creek, the Carmel River, and Los Padres Reservoir were all due to be restocked with catchable-size rainbow trout this week, subject to change depending on water conditions and "other unpredictable factors." (Ed. note: GOOD water conditions right now, positively sparkling!)

WHITE OAKS THEATRE ANNOUNCES SUMMER SEASON

White Oaks Theatre in Carmel Valley will open June 20 with Philip Barry's sophisticated comedy, "The Philadelphia Story." Two light musicals, "The Fantasticks" and "Little Mary Sunshine," will play later in the summer. Season ticket holders this year will be entitled, in addition, to attend any two of five experimental concerts which will also be held.

The concerts are new this year and have been included to add variety to the summer program and to afford the resident company an opportunity to present something special in different fields. Each of the five concerts will be given at least twice. Included in the concert program will be a Chamber Orchestra from Los Angeles, a dramatic reading with dance of Lorca's "Blood Wedding," "Thurber Carnival," and an evening of dance presented by the newly formed Theatre Dance West.

Theatre-goers will also be able to enjoy the outdoor lobby which was added last year. Members of the audience can gather there for pre-performance picnic suppers, theatre-talk during intermission, or meeting members of the cast around the fireplace after the show.

"Greensleeves Magic," a production for children by the Fantasy Players of White Oaks, will be presented this summer on alternate Saturday afternoons. During the past two years "Greensleeves" has toured the Monterey Bay area, but this summer will be presented only in the barn-theatre behind the Carmel Valley postoffice.

Besides season tickets, group rates for 20 or more and student rates for season or single tickets are available. Write c/o Box 309, CV, or telephone OL 9-2248, HA 4-6421, or MA 4-6739.

Farm Teams Still Need MEN

Some eager but disappointed young boys are still seeking coaches for the Little League's Farm Teams this season. CV DOG FANCIERS PREPARE FOR SHOW

June Wood of Carmel Valley will appear on KRON TV's "Community Circle" at 1:30 p.m. this Saturday in an interview about the Del Monte Kennel Club's 38th Annual All-Breed Dog Show and Obedience Trials to be held May 26 at Del Monte Lodge. Miss Wood's Dachshund, "Earwig," will also be a TV guest on channel 4.

Other Valley members of the Kennel Club who are busy at work on the forthcoming show are: Frank Grover, club president; Mrs. Frank Grover, bench show chairman; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Stevenson, Oswald Pick, Mrs. Paul H. Combs, Jr., and Jacklyn Cornelius.

NEW OFFSPRING AT WILLIAMSES

John and Lucinda Williams delightedly welcomed a new occupant of their horse corral in the early morning hours of May 8. The newcomer, Scooter, a blonde filly with come-hither eyelashes, is the issue of the Williamses' mare, Smokey, and Lyn Hodges' stallion, Oro. Not yet able to greet her future playmate was Anna Williams, not quite 3 months old, who preferred to sleep in her bassinet during the excitement in the barn.

St. Dunstan's Service At Building Site

St. Dunstan's will hold an 11:00 Holy Communion Family Service this coming Sunday, May 19 on the site of its future church, which will be built this summer, announces Rev. James Brock. A picnic will follow the service, with each family bringing its own lunch, chairs, blankets, or whatever equipment is considered desirable. To reach the church site, turn at Robinson Canyon Rd. (Farm Center). The church property is directly on the left as you cross the bridge.

The plot plan for the projected church building has been presented to the Planning Commission. The hearing will be on Tuesday, May 28. Architect Mel Blevens is now working on preliminary drawings for the building. Construction will probably begin in August, Rev. Brock estimates.

St. Dunstan's Women's Auxiliary will meet next Tuesday, May 21, at 10:00 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Townsend on Paso Robles in Rancho Canada.

CREDIT WHERE CREDIT IS DUE. . .

Whenever teen-agers get into trouble, it's juicy material for publicity. When teen-agers demonstrate responsibility, diligence, and social concern it would seem they deserve some notice, too.

Beth Myers and Juanita Flammini, on their own initiative, began pulling weeds from the undeveloped (and weedy) side of Valley Center, and didn't stop until they'd cleared the vacant strip between the Veterinarian's and Totsie's. Nadine Carver, who came upon the scene, aided them at the end.

Virtue WAS rewarded. Along came Robert Talbott, CV's famed manufacturer of super-haberdashery. Impressed by the improvements, he donated generous reimbursement to the young ladies.

To top it off, Jim Berta volunteered to haul away the piles of uprooted weeds in his truck.

WHEN WILL your small child learn to swim? The sooner, the safer--and more fun for him, more peace of mind for you. Free lessons for non-swimmers are among the many bonuses you get with a summer's membership at Saddle Mountain Ranch. MA 4-1617.

DISAPPOINTED BOYS can't join Farm Teams this summer because no adult males volunteered to coach. If ready, willing and even moderately able, please call Les Burdett at Hacienda Carmel.
